Synthetic Cold-Chain Container Trial

Two cold-chain container designs were each tested on 80 synthetic shipments.

Insulated Container A failed temperature control in 2.5 percent of shipments.

Foam Container B failed temperature control in 6.25 percent of shipments.

The temperature-control threshold was 8 degrees Celsius.

A failure meant a reading above the threshold for more than 10 consecutive minutes.